Hi, I'm Anders, and I'm really excited to be able to apply for the position as Senior Engineering Manager with your team in Copenhagen.

I'm excited because having a deeper purpose in my work life is really important to me, and working to support and foster creativity, curiosity and imagination would really motivate me.

Latest I've been a key player in the success of Zetland, where I had the overall technical responsibility of building our world class platform for distributing high quality journalism. I did this in close cooperation with the product team.

Now I'm ready to take the next steps in my career, and focus my full attention on what matters most to me. The intersection between humans and technology. By leading and sharing my views on software I hope to contribute with my part in making the world a more creative place.

My views on software are formed both by my years with hands-on experience but also reading and practicing principles from books like Domain-Driven Design by Eric Evans but just as much Designing Everyday Things by Don Norman.

I will contribute with an diplomatic and empathic person, and I am genuinely interested in making people feel motivated, welcome and safe.

My perseverance will help find the balance between high quality, simplicity, sustainable development, excellent UX and business agility.

Basically, I love working with people, I love technology and, well yes, I love playing with LEGO with my kids.

Thank you so much for your time. I really hope we'll be able to meet each other.
